Ki Teitzei Parsha

In this week's Parsha, Moses is taking care of himself and the Jewish people as well. He was always taking care of the Jewish people. This Parsha and the previous Parsha's as well. In every parsha we have been reading, Moses told the Jews to be nice to each other and treat each other well. That was the only way to be with each other. This was the only way the Jewish people could stay holy to each-other, they had learned to be holy from Moses.

This week's Parsha starts with the words, "When you go out to fight a war against your enemies, you have to know how to go against another group of people when you are approaching the Promised Land."

It was in this week's Parsha that the Jewish people would learn that it would be Moses last time that he would accompany them. Moses would die in this week's Parsha. He had lived a very long life, but like with all things it was his time to go.

G-d had decided that it was his time. The Jewish people had run out of time and there was no more bargaining with G-d. There were no more threats with G-d over the Jewish people going back to Egypt.

This week's Parsha, the text reads that the Jewish people would go to war with their enemies. They would not be alone, no G-d would deliver some of the enemies into the hands of the Jewish people. Some of the enemies would be held captive by the Jewish people.

The Jewish men would see among them a beautiful woman that they would desire and take her for themselves and they would take great care for her.
